- Although young people in foster care are often significantly impacted by trauma, the latest brain research shows that the teen years are a time of increased opportunity to rewire the brain and develop resilience and promote healing.
- If young people in foster care are given opportunities to exercise their still-developing brains—by planning their own lives and making their own decisions—they have more success
- · Positive Youth Development
- · Build connections to families friends, communities

So What Does Child Welfare Do?

- Critically important to this is ensuring young people in foster care experience the benefits of improved foster care services before they turn 18 in order to make an informed decision about taking advantage of extended care.
- Plan for their future and develop necessary skills
- By extending foster care to 21 and doing it right, we'll make sure that more young people have opportunities to succeed in school, work, and adult life.

- Engagement-FSW begins with engaging the young adult and building a helping relationship.
- Teaming-As engaging, FSW begins to build a team around the young adult.
- Assessment & Understanding-FSW must have a thorough understanding of the strengths and concerns of the young adult before the team can plan
- Planning-Team develops a plan for independence, permanency, selfsufficiency as well as strategies to assist the young adult for safety and well-being.
- · Implementation-A (transition) plan is implemented.
- Tracking & Adjustment-FSW tracks to determine whether the services and support are helping the young adult meet his/her goals.

- Actively engaging youth in developing life skills that will prepare them for successful transition.
- Relating to youth as resources rather than just recipients of services
- Valuing the individual strengths and uniqueness of each youth.
- Frequently discuss with young people their strengths, interests talents, goals and aspirations.

Internal Philosophical & Cultural Shift

- What can we do to help prepare this youth to be successful after 18?
- What skills does this person need to have to be successful after 18?
- Who are the young person's caring adults? What roles do they have?
- When young people actively participate in their own planning and service provision, they are equally invested in the outcomes.

- Positive reinforcement when they do well; do not just acknowledge them when they are doing poorly
- Check in with youth, even if everything appears to be going well. (i.e. Something might be happening that the youth may not openly want to say)
