From Chief Justice Jeff Bivins

Every day, the judges of our great state seek to further the pursuit of justice for the citizens of Tennessee. From the perspective of the individual who finds himself or herself before the court, there is no such thing as a small case. Indeed, our judges know it is their duty to guarantee that Tennessee's citizens, regardless of financial status, color, creed, or religion, receive justice and equality before the law.

Throughout the past year, the court system has continued in that pursuit of justice by striving to make the judiciary more efficient, help those less fortunate receive adequate legal counsel, and provide the best possible services to the citizens of Tennessee. This report showcases those efforts and much more.

The poorest Tennesseans continue to be a main priority for the Court, making sure their voices are heard. We understand that "Justice for All" is not a talking point or something reserved only for those with financial means, but instead, it is our ultimate goal and purpose. That is why this past year, we set out on a statewide listening tour, listening to the needs in every community, and reviewing how we provide legal counsel to those who cannot afford it.

This year we have also focused on our youngest citizens in Tennessee. We have adopted uniform best practices and juvenile rules for the entire state so that the same rules are applied consistently to families and children. In addition, we have streamlined how complex business litigation is resolved through the continuation of a business docket in Davidson County. As the first pilot program of its kind in Tennessee, we will continue to assess how the utilization of this project can promote efficiency and economic development all across our state.

Finally, we are undergoing a top to bottom review of our technology department and integrating more statistical analysis so that data-driven decisions can be made that are the best for our great state.

In the coming year, we will continue our endeavor to work hand-in-hand with our counterparts in the executive and legislative branches to maintain the system of checks and balances envisioned by our founders. We have sworn in six new judges this past year, and we know their tasks will be challenging yet worthy of the effort. As we look with anticipation at the year before us, I am proud of our judiciary and each judge's tireless devotion to the cause of justice.

In Justice Sandra Day O'Connor's words: "We don't accomplish anything in this world alone." And this year certainly is an example of the work accomplished across all three branches-together. From issues such as the expungement of records helping citizens get back to work, to providing consistent processes and procedures in every juvenile court from Mountain City to Memphis, to the first pilot project for complex commercial business litigation, we are working together for Tennessee.

This report is full of statistics, resources and data, including a continued emphasis on Access to Justice for all Tennesseans, as Chief Justice Bivins described earlier, and the dawning of a new day for high-tech modernization of the court system.

We have expanded our efforts to improve legal resources for the 1.2 million Tennesseans living in poverty through partnerships with bar associations and nonprofits across the state through HELP4TN. Every dollar invested in legal assistance in the state produces a return of $11.00; an overall estimated impact of $188 million to meet basic legal needs in our communities.

This year marked the largest Supreme Court Advancing Legal Education for Students (SCALES) Project event in history, hosted by Cumberland University, where 1500 high school students had a front row seat to a Tennessee Supreme Court hearing. The Tennessee Supreme Court also received the national Sandra Day O'Connor Public Service Award for not only providing more than 32,000 students a real world civics lesson but also substantive curriculum about the cases; and even the opportunity to ask the participating attorneys live questions.

The General Assembly passed, and Governor Bill Haslam signed legislation to allow E-filing at the appellate level to start this year. We are providing technological innovations resulting in both cost savings and efficiency. We will be collecting and analyzing data as we build the first repository to capture general sessions data, where the largest number of Tennesseans are served.

Nationally, the Tennessee Judiciary serves as a leader and innovator, including the launch of the first Human Trafficking Court, and more than 50 specialty courts to serve the needs of veterans, as well as persons who suffer from mental challenges and those in recovery. While the judicial branch is embracing cutting edge best practices, we are also ensuring that the citizens of Tennessee continue to be provided open, transparent and impartial justice for all. I look forward to working with the other branches regarding improved data collection, top-notch training across the entire judicial system, and improving the safety of our courtrooms and all those we serve.

Meet Your Tennessee Supreme Court

Justice Holly Kirby

Justice Holly Kirby was appointed to the Supreme Court by Gov. Bill Haslam, and joined the Court in September 2014. Previously, Justice Kirby served for almost 19 years on the Tennessee Court of Appeals, and was the first woman ever to sit on that Court. She graduated from the University of Memphis School of Law in 1982, and then served as a federal law clerk for the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals. Justice Kirby then practiced law with the Memphis law firm of Burch, Porter & Johnson until her appointment to the TN Court of Appeals in 1995. Since then she has won five statewide elections. Justice Kirby lives in Memphis.

Justice Cornelia A. Clark

Justice Clark, of Franklin, was appointed to the Supreme Court in September 2005, elected in 2006 and 2014, and served as Chief Justice from 2010 to 2012. Justice Clark received her B.A. degree from Vanderbilt University, M.A.T. from Harvard University, and J.D. from Vanderbilt University School of Law in 1979. She practiced law in Nashville and Franklin from 1979 until 1989. She served as circuit judge from 1989 to 1999 in the 21st Judicial District. She was director of the Tennessee Administrative Office of the Courts from 1999 to 2005.

Chief Justice Jeff Bivins

Chief Justice Jeff Bivins was appointed by Gov. Bill Haslam to serve on the Supreme Court in 2014, and became chief justice in September 2016. He served on the Court of Criminal Appeals from 2011-2014. Prior to that, he served as circuit court judge for the 21st Judicial District from 1999-2000 and from 2005-2011. He previously served as Assistant Commissioner and General Counsel for the Tennessee Department of Personnel and in private law practice.

Justice Sharon G. Lee

Justice Sharon G. Lee was appointed to the Supreme Court in October 2008, was elected in 2010 and 2014, and served as Chief Justice from 2014-2016. She received a law degree from the University of Tennessee College of Law. She engaged in the private practice of law in Madisonville from 1978-2004, during which time she served as Attorney for Monroe County, as City Judge for Madisonville, and City Attorney for Madisonville and Vonore. She was appointed to the Court of Appeals in 2004, and elected in 2004 and 2006.

Justice Roger A. Page

Justice Roger A. Page was appointed to the Supreme Court in January 2016, and confirmed by the legislature in February 2016. He was a judge on the Tennessee Court of Criminal Appeals since his appointment by Gov. Bill Haslam in December 2011. He was previously elected to serve as a circuit court judge for the 26th Judicial District. Page was an assistant attorney general from 1991-1998. He was in private practice from 1985-1991, and a law clerk for a federal judge from 1984-1985. Page received his law degree from the University of Memphis School of Law.

Tennessee Supreme Court

The Tennessee Supreme Court is the state’s court of last resort. The five Tennessee Supreme Court justices may accept appeals of civil and criminal cases from lower state courts. They also interpret the laws and constitutions of Tennessee and the United States. The Tennessee Supreme Court may assume jurisdiction over undecided cases in the Court of Appeals or Court of Criminal Appeals when there is a special need for an expedited decision. Attorneys present oral arguments before the Tennessee Supreme Court. Unlike trials in lower courts, there are no witnesses, juries, or testimonies in the Tennessee Supreme Court.

After the Tennessee Supreme Court justices have heard oral arguments and reviewed the attorneys’ written materials, or briefs, they issue written decisions, known as opinions. Tennessee Supreme Court opinions on federal constitutional issues can be appealed only to the United States Supreme Court, which exercises discretion regarding whether to consider the appeals. The Tennessee Supreme Court typically meets about 16 times per year and will hold sessions in Jackson, Knoxville and Nashville as required by the state constitution. The court also meets in other locations as necessary. A few times a year, the Tennessee Supreme Court takes their oral arguments on the road as part of the SCALES Project (Supreme Court Advancing Legal Education for Students).

The SCALES Project gives Tennessee high schools the unique opportunity to hear Supreme Court oral arguments and learn more about the judicial process. In 2016, the Court held the largest SCALES event in history at Cumberland University in Lebanon, in which 1500 students attended. SCALES was also held for Boys State at Tennessee Tech University in Cookeville, and at Lipscomb University in Nashville for Girls State. More than 2,600 total students participated in those events in 2016. In total, the program has reached more than 30,000 students in two decades.

Tennessee Supreme Court Receives National Award

The Tennessee Supreme Court was recognized for its SCALES Project as the 2016 recipient of the Sandra Day O’Connor Award for the Advancement of Civics Education.

The SCALES Project is Supreme Court Advancing Legal Education for Students – a program that was founded by the Court in 1995 and designed to educate high school students about the legal system and the appellate court process.

Through the program, the Tennessee Supreme Court travels to several different locations throughout the state each year and holds court in local communities before hundreds of high school and college students.

Created by the General Assembly in 1925, the Tennessee Court of Appeals hears appeals in civil cases from trial courts and certain state boards and commissions.

The court has 12 members from the three grand divisions of the state. Panels of three judges hear cases in Jackson, Knoxville and Nashville.

All decisions made by the Court of Appeals may be appealed, by permission, to the Tennessee Supreme Court. As in all three appellate courts, Court of Appeals hearings do not include witnesses, juries, or testimonies. Instead, attorneys may present oral and written arguments.

Court of Appeals judges are appointed by the governor, must be confirmed by the legislature, and are elected on a retention ballot every eight years.

Court of Criminal Appeals

The Court of Criminal Appeals was created by the legislature in 1967 to hear trial court appeals in felony and misdemeanor cases, as well as post-conviction petitions.

The Tennessee General Assembly increased the membership of the court from nine to 12 on Sept. 1, 1996.

The composition, court sessions, appointments and elections are similar to the Court of Appeals, except the judges travel throughout the state to hear cases.

All Court of Criminal Appeals decisions may be appealed to the state Supreme Court by permission, except in capital cases, which are appealed automatically.

Access to Justice

The Tennessee Supreme Court declared Access to Justice its number one strategic priority in 2008, and appointed an Access to Justice Commission. The Commission makes recommendations for programs and initiatives to serve disadvantaged Tennesseans who have civil legal needs and are not able to afford an attorney. The Commission serves as the statewide coordinating arm for legal services and Access to Justice organizations. The Court recognizes that the civil legal needs gap in Tennessee is not shrinking. Indigent and working-poor families continue to experience more civil legal problems caused by family disputes, unemployment, predatory loans, uninsured medical bills, domestic violence, evictions, and foreclosures.

The Access to Justice Initiative continues to thrive due to the significant number of attorneys who volunteer their time to assist disadvantaged Tennesseans. Since 2010, Tennessee attorneys have reported over 3.2 million hours of pro bono services, and there are thousands more hours that are not reported.

In 2016, the Access to Justice Initiative:

- Trained over 130 pro bono attorneys through bar associations and Tennessee Faith & Justice Alliance events.
- Served over 750 members of the public at eight events focused on expungement and re-entry issues.
- Distributed over $76,000 to legal aid organizations from the Access to Justice Fund which consists of voluntary donations given by attorneys when they renew their law license.

Tennessee Pro Bono Hours Worth $100 Million

The Tennessee Supreme Court Access to Justice Commission's 2015 Pro Bono Report shows that Tennessee attorneys are donating more than 500,000 hours of their time annually, worth more than $100 million.

For the calendar year 2014, nearly half of all attorneys reported doing some kind of pro bono work. The report shows that 7,615 attorneys practicing in Tennessee provided 568,170 hours of pro bono, an average of over 74 hours per reporting attorney. As of December 31, 2015, 42 percent of the 18,322 active attorneys licensed in Tennessee, with a primary address in Tennessee, reported participating in pro bono activity during 2014.

The majority of these hours (68 percent) were provided to persons of limited means without a fee or at a reduced fee. The second highest category of service was to non-profit organizations serving persons of limited means without a fee at 14 percent of the total hours.

The variety of projects attorneys participate in that provide free and reduced-rate legal services has expanded in recent years. The report includes law offices that have adopted pro bono policies, Pillar Law Firms that handle specific types of matters through referrals from Legal Aid, and attorneys who volunteer through the online virtual legal clinic TN Free Legal Answers (formerly Online TN Justice).

The Court's initiative has received national recognition for its success in the Access to Justice arena including the National Judicial College's Advancement of Justice Award in 2014. Members of the Tennessee Supreme Court are routinely featured at national conferences and have been involved in Senate briefings on the accomplishments of the Tennessee Access to Justice Initiative.

Indigent Representation Task Force to Present its Report to the Tennessee Supreme Court in 2017

In late 2015, under the direction of then Chief Justice Sharon Lee, the Tennessee Supreme Court appointed judges, attorneys, and other stakeholders involved in the criminal justice system to the Indigent Representation Task Force to review practices regarding issues surrounding the delivery of representation and compensation for work with defendants unable to afford legal counsel.

The task force held an eight-city "listening tour" with stops in Memphis, Trenton, Nashville, Franklin, Cookeville, Cleveland, Knoxville, and Johnson City. The Task Force benefited greatly from the presentations and written submissions of the bench, Bar, and hundreds of interested citizens during the "listening tour."

Chief Justice Jeff Bivins has expressed the Court's continued support of the Task Force. "The Court has been very pleased with the work of this group," he said. "The Task Force is performing a great public service, and the members of the Court are united in our support of the Task Force."

Task Force Members: Judge Vicki Snyder, Rep. William Lamberth, Susan Mattson, Lela Hollabaugh, Jason Gichner, Judge Loyce Lambert Ryan, Dean William Koch, Torry Johnson, III, DarKenya Waller, Justice Sharon Lee, Dwight Tarwater, Mark Mesler

The Task Force is working diligently to present its report to the Tennessee Supreme Court on or before April 3, 2017.

The Task Force is chaired by Dean of Nashville School of Law and former Tennessee Supreme Court Justice William C. Koch, Jr. The other members include: Lela Hollabaugh, partner, Bradley Arant Boult Cummings LLP; Judge Deanna Bell Johnson, Circuit Court Judge, 21st Judicial District; Susan L. Kay, Associate Dean for Clinical Affairs and Clinical Professor of Law, Vanderbilt University Law School; Rep. William Lamberth, State House District 44; Susan Mattson, Principle Legislative Research Analyst, Tennessee Comptroller of the Treasury Office; Mark A. Mesler, II, Attorney, Rosenblum and Reisman in Memphis; Judge Loyce Lambert Ryan, Shelby County General Sessions Court; Judge Vicki S. Snyder, Henry County General Sessions Court; Judge Barry A. Steelman, Criminal Court Judge, 11th Judicial District; Dwight Tarwater, General Counsel, office of Gov. Bill Haslam; Sen. John Stevens, State District 24; DarKenya Waller, Managing Attorney, Legal Aid Society of Middle Tennessee and the Cumberland.

Nationally Honored

Tennessee Ranks Top 10 in the Nation for Providing Access to Courts

Tennessee ranks ninth in the United States for providing access to its courts, according to the 2016 Justice Index, a nationwide study that ranks states according to their adoption of selected best practices for ensuring access to justice. Furthermore, Tennessee takes the No. 1 ranking in the Southeast.

The Tennessee Supreme Court deemed access to justice the No. 1 strategic initiative in 2008 and formed the Access to Justice Commission, which has since accomplished innovations such as JusticeforallTN.com, promoted pro bono work among lawyers, and developed plain language forms for self-represented litigants. As part of the Tennessee Supreme Court's initiative, the Administrative Office of the Courts has increased court interpreter availability, and helped coordinate expungement efforts to assist citizens in returning to the workforce. Now, the Tennessee court system is recognized as a national leader in guaranteeing equality in the courtrooms.

The Justice Index is an online resource that relies on data and other indicators to assess a state's ability to provide access to the civil legal system regardless of the ability to afford a lawyer, speak and understand English, or navigate the legal system without an accommodation. In the Self-Represented Index, Tennessee ranks among the top 13 states. Self-represented litigants are people who advocate on their own behalf in a case, such as evictions, mortgage foreclosures, child custody and child support proceedings, and debt collection cases.

To aid the large number of Tennesseans who represent themselves before a court, the Tennessee Supreme Court-appointed Access to Justice Commission partners with the Tennessee Alliance for Legal Services, the Tennessee Bar Association, and many statewide and regional legal service providers to create resources. In the nation, as many as two-thirds of the litigants represent themselves. In 2014, Tennessee's Access to Justice Commission developed an online curriculum in high-needs areas of law to assist self-represented Tennesseans. One of the most recent partnerships to assist Tennessee citizens is the Faith and Justice Alliance, with more than 50 faith-based organizations, and 160 individual volunteers to date participating.

Improving Awareness of and Gaining Access to Expungements

Sen. Steven Dickerson (R-Nashville) and Rep. Harold M. Love, Jr. (D-Nashville), along with leaders in the judicial and legal communities announced an initiative to improve awareness of and access to expungements in Tennessee through a webpage, providing details on eligibility for expungements, links to local information, and resources to help people get started, as well as outlining what they can expect from the process.

Davidson County launched the first-of-its-kind court in Tennessee aimed at addressing the issue of human trafficking.

Tennessee Trial Courts

CIRCUIT COURTS are courts of general jurisdiction in Tennessee. Circuit Court judges hear civil and criminal cases and appeals of decisions from Juvenile, Municipal and General Sessions Courts. The jurisdiction of Circuit Courts often overlaps that of the Chancery Courts. Criminal cases are tried in Circuit Court except in districts with separate Criminal Courts established by the General Assembly. CHANCERY COURTS are a good example of the court system’s English heritage. The traditional equity courts are based on the English system in which the chancellor acted as the “King’s conscience.” Chancellors may, by law and tradition, modify the application of strict legal rules and adapt relief to the circumstances of individual cases. CRIMINAL COURTS were established by the legislature to relieve Circuit Courts in areas with heavy caseloads. In addition to having jurisdiction over criminal cases, Criminal Court judges hear misdemeanor appeals from lower courts. In districts without Criminal Courts, criminal cases are handled at the trial level by Circuit Court judges. PROBATE COURTS are created by the legislature and given jurisdiction over probate of wills and administration of estates. Probate judges also handle conservatorships and guardianships.
