Re: In re: Petition to Amend Tenn. Sup. Ct. R. 21 — No. ADM2025-01538

To the Honorable Justices of the Tennessee Supreme Court:

I write to express my strong support for the petition to amend Tennessee Supreme Court Rule 21 to require that, every three years, Tennessee attorneys earn at least one hour of CLE in mental health or substance use disorders, counted within the existing ethics/professionalism (EP) requirement. This triennial credit is modest in scope yet significant in impact.

The petition—brought by Kent A. Halkett, the Tennessee Lawyers Assistance Program (TLAP), and the Tennessee Alliance for Legal Services (TALS)—aligns Tennessee’s CLE framework with best practices that recognize the connection between lawyer well-being and competent, ethical representation. Integrating this hour into EP helps normalize engagement with these topics, equips lawyers to recognize warning signs, and advances the public’s interest in a healthy, effective bar while minimizing administrative burden.

Proactive and preventive focus. Too often, crises in our profession are preceded by recognizable but unaddressed warning signs. A structured, recurring hour is a low-cost, high-yield preventive measure—prompting lawyers to check in on themselves and their colleagues and to learn how to connect with help before a concern becomes a crisis. It is precisely the kind of measured, proactive intervention that can reduce harm and, in some cases, prevent tragedy.

Elevating the culture and quality of the Tennessee bar. Professionalism is a living standard. By revisiting mental health and substance use topics on a predictable cadence, we reinforce a culture of civility, empathy, and responsibility. That culture supports better client service, more sustainable practice, and improved workplace climates across firms, courts, and agencies. This hour is an investment in the quality of Tennessee’s legal services.

Leading by example. The ABA's 2017 MCLE Model Rule contemplates a triennial mental-health/substance-use credit. So far, jurisdictions including California, Oregon, Minnesota, Illinois, Nevada, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Florida have adopted MCLE requirements or frameworks addressing lawyer well-being. Adopting this amendment would position Tennessee as another practical example for jurisdictions considering similar reforms.

For these reasons, I respectfully urge the Court to adopt the proposed amendment to Rule 21.

Thank you for the opportunity to comment.

Dear Mr. Hivner,

I am writing about the proposed amendment to TN S. Ct. Rule 21 to require that Tennessee lawyers earn at least one hour of mandatory Ethics and Professionalism mental health and substance disorder programming every three compliance years. I am very much in support of this proposed amendment. In my work with the Tennessee Bar Association over four decades, I have seen how much of a problem these issues present for lawyers, and I believe that this step to increase awareness and treatment of the problem would be in the interest of our entire profession.

Please let the court know of my support.

I am not in favor of the proposed change requiring Tennessee attorneys to take an hour CLE related to mental health and substance abuse every three years. CLE hours come with a price of either time or money and while mental health and substance abuse are serious issue for some attorneys, for those attorneys that do not face either of these issues, money and time would be better spent on an ethics subject related to the individual attorney's practice.

Instead, CLE providers should be encouraged to offer courses on both mental health and substance abuse to attorneys. Taking CLE courses on these subjects should be voluntary rather than mandatory.

Subject: Comment re: Proposed Amendment to Rule 21 re: Mandatory Mental Health/Substance Use CLE

Warning: Unusual sender

You don't usually receive emails from this address. Make sure you trust this sender before taking any actions.

To the Honorable Justices of the Tennessee Supreme Court:

I write to respectfully oppose the proposed amendment to Rule 21 that would require Tennessee attorneys to obtain at least one hour of mental-health or substance-use-related continuing legal education within the existing ethics/professionalism requirement every three years.

I fully support the goals which I imagine underlie the petition: improving lawyer well-being, reducing stigma around mental health and substance use disorders, and promoting access to assistance. However, I do not believe that mandating this specific CLE content is the appropriate or effective way to achieve those goals. My concerns are as follows:

- 1. Mandatory participation in mental-health programming is unusually intrusive for a CLE requirement.
Ethics and professionalism CLE traditionally focuses on conduct, standards, and obligations applicable to all lawyers. By contrast, mental health and substance-use programming addresses intensely personal issues that do not necessarily affect all attorneys and that some may reasonably prefer not to explore in a compulsory setting. Requiring every lawyer to attend such content risks blurring the line between professional regulation and personal autonomy.
- 2. Compulsory attendance is unlikely to reach the lawyers who are truly at risk.
Lawyers in genuine distress often avoid settings that feel performative, public, or compulsory. Mandatory mental-health/substance abuse CLE may check a regulatory box without changing outcomes for those most in need of help. Voluntary, confidential, and stigma-free avenues for assistance are far more likely to connect with at-risk individuals than a mandated hour of programming.
- 3. Concerns exist about the burdens of engaging with assistance programs.
Some attorneys have expressed, in anecdotal conversations within the profession, concerns about the practical burdens they faced when seeking help through TLAP or related channels, including extensive monitoring, counseling requirements, and burdensome costs that added financial burden, professional stigma, and stress during an already challenging period. While experiences vary and TLAP provides important services, these perceptions, and the real-life stories they are based upon, matter. Mandatory CLE messaging will not address the underlying deterrent that attorneys fear that seeking help will trigger onerous obligations. This proposed rule change does not address these structural concerns. Instead, it creates an additional regulatory requirement for attorneys without ensuring that Tennessee attorneys who need help will feel safe, supported, and financially able to seek it.
- 4. Existing rules already allow and encourage this type of programming without requiring it.
Providers are free to offer high-quality CLE on lawyer well-being, and attorneys may voluntarily choose such programs. Many already do. TLAP has often presented an hour portion of CLE at many conferences or bar association meetings I have attended over the years. It is not lack of knowledge that is the deterrent to attorneys utilizing these services. The Court can continue to encourage such offerings through education, communication, and support, without converting them into mandatory content that is not applicable to all attorneys.

5. A mandate may unintentionally contribute to stigma rather than reduce it.

By singling out mental health or substance use for a compulsory requirement, the rule may inadvertently reinforce the perception that these topics warrant special scrutiny by the licensing authority, and make attorneys experiencing these issues more likely to hide and not address it. I think that a better approach may be to integrate well-being content organically into broader professionalism initiatives, preserving attorney choice while normalizing the subject.

Nothing in this comment is intended to diminish the importance of lawyer well-being or the valuable work TLAP and TALS perform. However, mandatory CLE on mental health and substance use is not the most effective or least intrusive way to advance those goals. Encouraging voluntary engagement, improving accessibility of support services, and addressing perceived barriers to seeking help (including financial burdens and heightened scrutiny and judgment) would more directly benefit the attorneys who need assistance most.

For these reasons, I respectfully urge the Court not to adopt the proposed amendment to Rule 21. Thank you for your time and consideration.

Supreme Court of Tennessee

RE: Comment to Proposed Amendment to TN S. Ct. Rule 21
Mental Health

To the Supreme Court of Tennessee:

I respectfully submit the following comments regarding the Petition to Amend Supreme Court Rule 21, which suggests requiring at least one (1) hour of Continuing Legal Education (CLE) credit for mental health or substance use disorders programming in a three-year period, to be included within the ethics/professionalism credit.

For the last decade of my career, I've been chasing something the legal profession was never built to support: real work-life balance. Our industry has spent generations quietly expecting lawyers to perform a superhuman act—show up sharp, polished, and perfect every hour of every day, all year long. Anyone who has actually practiced knows that expectation isn't just unrealistic; it's harmful. We're human. And the sooner we acknowledge that, the better off our clients—and our profession—will be.

Very early in practice, I learned the hard truth: when a lawyer's mental or physical health falters, their advocacy falters with it. You cannot separate the two. We talk a lot about ethics, competence, diligence, and professionalism—but none of those ideals can be met by an attorney who is running on fumes. Over the years, I've made it a priority to invest in my own mental health, to develop the tools to manage stress and avoid burnout, and to model that behavior for the young lawyers I mentor and even the seasoned practitioners who sometimes need the reminder.

And after a decade of watching the toll that unaddressed stress takes on attorneys at every level, I can say this with conviction: we cannot meet our ethical obligations unless we are actively safeguarding our own mental, physical, and emotional wellbeing.

That is why I strongly urge the Court to consider going further than requiring just one (1) hour every three (3) years. This is not merely a procedural adjustment—it's a necessary step toward protecting attorneys, improving client representation, and strengthening the integrity of our profession.

As currently required, Tennessee attorneys must obtain a minimum of fifteen (15) hours of CLE credit each year, comprised of three (3) hours of ethics/professionalism (EP credit) and twelve

(12) hours of General credit. While the proposed amendment to Rule 21, following recommendations from the American Bar Association (ABA) Model Rule on MCLE, represents a meaningful step toward addressing attorney well-being, the gravity of the mental health crisis within the legal profession warrants a more proactive, continuous educational approach. Therefore, if Tennessee wishes to prioritize the health and sustainability of its legal professionals and the integrity of the justice system, I recommend removing one (1) hour of General CLE and replacing it with one (1) hour of Mental Health CLE to be completed each year.

The Need for Enhanced Mental Health Education

The statistics demonstrating the extent of behavioral health problems among legal professionals highlight the urgency of adopting an annual requirement:

- Elevated Mental Health Concerns: Attorneys experience substance use and mental health concerns at rates significantly higher than the general population.¹ Before the pandemic, studies showed that 28% of attorneys struggled with some level of depression and 19% exhibited symptoms of anxiety.² A 2021 survey of law students found nearly 40% experienced depression. More recently, survey data indicated that the rate of depression remained high at 33%, and anxiety rates were near 68.7%.³
- Substance Abuse: Attorneys screen positive for hazardous, harmful, or potentially alcohol-dependent drinking at rates much higher than other populations, such as 20.6% in a 2016 national study.⁴ The ubiquitous nature of alcohol in the legal professional culture demonstrates both its ready availability and social acceptability. In fact, many of our various Bar functions and networking opportunities generally involve a happy hour or some form of alcohol. While alcohol consumption is not improper, this only highlights the prevalence that it has within our profession, which can lead to its abuse.
- Suicide Risk: Suicide prevention is a critical priority in the legal profession.⁵ Studies report that suicide is the third leading cause of death among attorneys. Attorneys with high stress levels are twenty-two (22) times more likely to contemplate suicide than those with low perceived stress.⁶

These significant levels of distress impair an attorney's ability to perform competently, which directly affects client representation.⁷ An unwell attorney may struggle with core ethical obligations, including competence (ABA Model Rule 1.1) and diligence (Rule 1.3), leading to potential errors like missed deadlines, poor communication, and impaired judgment.

Systemic Causes and the Role of the Bar

The crisis is driven by systemic factors inherent to the profession, including the pressure-filled, competitive environment, and intensive time demands.^{8 9} Key issues contributing to mental well-being difficulties include the stressful nature of the work, intensive work/time demands, poor work-life balance, and high levels of pressure.¹⁰ Workplaces that value Financial Worth/Availability (productivity and revenue) over the human worth and professionalism of their attorneys report significantly worse health outcomes and higher stress levels among their staff.¹¹

Law firms and organizations are increasingly being called upon to address structural and cultural issues, rather than focusing solely on increasing the "resilience" of individual legal professionals.¹² The requirement of mandatory, yearly Mental Health CLE is an institutional intervention that can:

1. Combat Stigma: Many attorneys are reluctant to seek help due to the stigma surrounding mental health and the fear of professional repercussions.¹³ Requiring all attorneys to engage in yearly mental health programming can help normalize the issue and reduce this perceived stigma.
2. Ensure Continuous Education: Mental health programming addresses issues like depression, anxiety, grief, loss, stress and burnout.¹⁴ Continuous, annual education ensures attorneys are regularly reminded of these critical topics and available resources, fostering a culture of ongoing self-care, as opposed to episodic learning spaced three years apart.¹⁵ A lot can happen in three years.
3. Provide Resources: TLAP, the Tennessee Attorneys Assistance Program, offers consultation, referral, intervention, and crisis counseling to attorneys, judges, and law students.¹⁶ TLAP's mission specifically includes educating the bench and bar about the causes and remedies for impairments. Mandatory mental health CLE programs should, as the petitioners recommend, contain resource information on how to obtain assistance. Moreover, for attorneys who schedule and enroll in a TLAP program, they could be given the option to disclose enrollment (since services are confidential) to receive a one-time 1 hour of credit, further encouraging the use of TLAP's resources.

Comparative and Economic Justification

While the ABA Model Rule suggests a triennial requirement, several jurisdictions recognize the necessity of a more frequent commitment.¹⁷ For instance, Iowa requires one CLE hour of wellness or diversity and inclusion annually as part of its 15-hour requirement.¹⁸

The recommendation to shift one hour from the General CLE requirement to a dedicated Mental Health CLE hour annually ensures that this vital education is mandatory without increasing the total required CLE hours per year. Given the high rates of mental health issues and the associated risks—including increased attrition costs (which can easily cost a large firm $400,000 USD for each associate who leaves) and potential malpractice claims—investing one (1) hour annually in the well-being and competence of the legal workforce is a prudent measure that supports both the integrity and the economic sustainability of the profession.^{19 20 21} The World Health Organization estimates that for every $1.00 invested in treating common mental health disorders, there is a $4.00 return on investment in improved health and productivity.²²

In conclusion, adopting an annual requirement for Mental Health CLE, replacing one (1) hour of General credit, is a necessary and proportionate response to the continuing crisis in attorney well-being, reinforcing the professional duty of self-care and ensuring the competency and diligence expected of all Tennessee legal professionals.

RE: ADM 2025-01538

Dear Mr. Hivner:

The Knoxville Bar Association ("KBA") Professionalism Committee ("Committee") carefully considered the petition by TLAP and TALS to amend Rule 21 of the Rules of the Tennessee Supreme Court referenced in the Order above. The Committee presented a report with its recommendation on the proposed amendments at the November 19, 2025 meeting of the KBA Board of Governors (the "KBA Board"). After consideration, the KBA Board submits the following comment on the proposed amendment.

The petition proposes amending Section 3.01(a) of Rule 21 to require at least one hour of CLE credit for mental health or substance abuse disorders programming in a three-year period to be included in the yearly required three hours of ethics/professionalism credit. Every three years, at least one of the three ethics/professionalism credits will be for approved mental health and substance abuse disorders programming.

Although the Committee and the KBA Board certainly agree that lawyers should be aware of the resources available for mental health and substance use disorders, the KBA Board respectfully opposes the petition, on two main grounds. First, the KBA is concerned that including the requested hour of substance abuse related programming in the ethics and professionalism credits will unduly sacrifice or dilute continuing education on substantive legal ethics, especially since the amount of required ethics instruction has already been broadened to include credits for professionalism. In the KBA's view, it is important to maximize opportunities for attorneys to receive instruction in legal ethics. Second, the petition does not identify any empirical data suggesting that one hour of instruction every three years would provide a significant or material improvement in awareness.

In short, the proposed amendment appears unlikely to provide significant benefit, but likely to dilute the opportunity for important instruction in ethics. The KBA Board respectfully asks the Supreme Court to deny the petition.

As always, the KBA appreciates the invitation to consider and comment on proposed rules changes.

Sincerely,

Re: No. ADM2025-01538

Dear Mr. Hivner:

I write in support of the proposed amendment to Section 3.01(a) of Rule 21 of the Rules of the Tennessee Supreme Court to require at least one (1) hour of CLE credit for mental health or substance use disorder programs every three (3) years as part of our ethics/professional credit obligation. Self and society awareness about and treatment for mental health related disorders are chronically deficient throughout the United States and have been for many years. As the CEO of a large firm for over 20 years, I am very familiar with the pressures that our profession imposes on lawyers and the resultant disorders. My father was a very successful attorney and eventually succumbed to alcoholism as well. My mother suffered from bipolar disorder off and on her entire adult life. The lack of understanding about these disorders, the stigma associated with them, the driven but private nature of professionals generally, and the need for continuing improvements and options for treatment are a compelling problem for professionals and society generally. I fully support this proposed amendment. Thank you for your consideration. If you have any questions or need further information, please contact me.

To whom it may concern:

As stated in The Path to Lawyer Well-Being: Practical Recommendations for Positive Change promulgated by the American Bar Association's National Task Force on Lawyer Well Being, "[t]o be a good lawyer, one has to be a healthy lawyer."

On behalf of Lawyers Concerned for Lawyers (MN), Minnesota's lawyer assistance program, I write to express our support for the Petition to Amend Tennessee's Supreme Court Rule 21 (Docket No. ADM2025-01538), that would require one hour of mental health/substance use continuing legal education every three years. Minnesota adopted a similar CLE requirement in 2024.

Programs that focus on issues around mental health and substance use can normalize conversations about mental health, thereby reducing the stigma around seeking help, and helping lawyers to recognize early warning signs in themselves and their colleagues. It also reinforces the importance of lawyer self-care and ensures that every attorney is made aware of resources that are available to them when a crisis arises. It allows for education and awareness of these issues that lawyers might not otherwise be exposed to absent this requirement.

The proposal aligns with the national trend to require similar courses, as is the case in Minnesota, and is amplified by the American Bar Association's recommendation that jurisdictions include at least one hour of mental health or substance use education within their CLE frameworks.

Thank you for your commitment to promoting and protecting the well-being of Tennessee's lawyers and the clients they serve. Please let me know if you have any questions.

This email is in support of the proposed Amendment to TN S. Ct. Rule 21 to require that TN lawyers earn at least one (1) hour of mandatory Ethics and Professionalism mental health and substance use disorder programming every three (3) compliance years.

I have seen more than a few TN lawyers refrain from seeking help or counselling because of self-denial or fear of the stigma that used to be prevalent with seeking mental health assistance over my 44 years of legal practice. Everything reasonable should be done to improve the level of awareness among the TN bar to encourage those who need help to seek assistance through TLAP or private counselling, including the enactment of the proposed Rule amendment.

RE: ADM2025-01538

Tennessee Alliance for Legal Services (TALS) supports ADM2025-01538- IN RE: PETITION TO AMEND SUPREME COURT RULE 21. TALS supports the request in the Petition and believes that implementing the CLE requirements will be a beacon of light and hope on the overlooked topic of attorney mental health and wellbeing. The required education will help attorneys better balance the pressures and challenges of being an attorney and in the end, save lives. The Petition does not increase the annual CLE hours required for attorneys but, rather, requires just one CLE credit hour every three years about attorney mental health and wellbeing.

TALS has experience facilitating and conducting CLE sessions in the area of attorney of mental health and wellbeing. Annually, TALS facilitates and sponsors its statewide conference, Equal Justice University (EJU), for over 300 attendees. TALS works hard to ensure that experts provide sessions at each EJU about attorney mental health and wellbeing. Historically, these sessions have been very well-received and well attended.

Additionally, TALS has extensive experience offering continuing legal education (CLE) sessions through monthly free CLE offerings on topics of interest to attorneys. TALS believes so strongly that this Petition has the possibility to change attorney lives that it is committed to providing four free CLE virtual sessions on attorney mental health and wellbeing every year. The virtual sessions would ensure attorneys will be able to complete the CLE requirement easily and efficiently from anywhere.

To Whom it May Concern,

I am writing to comment in SUPPORT of the Petition filed by Kent Halkett et al. to Amend Rule 21. I practiced law for 42 years and retired as a partner from Bass Berry & Sims in 2023.

Mr. Halkett is a good friend and classmate (VLS '81). I know his personal story. He has been extremely courageous in sharing his own experience with severe depression and has worked tirelessly to bring public awareness to the services available to members of our profession struggling with mental health issues.

In the last five years, I have lost to suicide three close friends and one former client who was General Counsel of a Nashville public company. Depression and similar mental health issues is a crisis for practicing attorneys.

We have tremendous resources available to members of our profession, but I understand that very few lawyers know of or use these excellent services. This lack of knowledge is easily remedied by the proposed Amendment.

The Amendment will save lives. Requiring lawyers to take one hour of CLE every three years to learn about the risk of depression and mental health resources available is a very small price to pay. I urge the Court to adopt the Amendment.

Dear Mr. Hivner,

I am writing concerning the Petition to Amend Supreme Court Rule 21, Docket Number ADM2025-01538, which has been filed by Kent Halkett, the Tennessee Lawyers Assistance Program, and the Tennessee Alliance for Legal Services.

The proposed amendment would require lawyers to engage in one hour of mental health and substance use disorders programming every three years as part of their ethics/professionalism CLE requirements. I wholeheartedly support this proposed change to the CLE requirements for all lawyers. It does not add any additional CLE hours, nor is it an unreasonable burden on lawyers.

Kent Halkett and I were in the same law school class at Vanderbilt, graduating in 1981. We were friends in addition to being classmates, and he is one of the last people in our class who I would ever have expected to suffer from depression.

I have been incredibly impressed by Kent's willingness to advocate for mental health support for lawyers, and his personal story provides a face to a problem that too many other lawyers face. If you are not aware of his story, here is a link to an article that describes his journey:

<https://afcc-ca.org/a-biglaw-partners-journey-through-clinical-depression/>

I urge the Supreme Court to adopt this proposed change to the CLE requirements. The evidence of lawyers suffering from depression, substance abuse, and other mental health issues is overwhelming. As the Petition cites, suicide is the third leading cause of death among lawyers, compared to suicide being the 11th leading cause of death overall. Granting the Petition will not fix this issue, but if it helps one lawyer who is struggling with mental health issues, then it would be well worth it.

The Petitioners set forth a strong case, and I urge the Court to grant the Petition.

Thank you for allowing me an opportunity to state my support for the proposed amendment to Rule 21.

Re: Opposition to No. ADM2025-01538

Dear Mr. Hivner:

I oppose Petition No. ADM2025-01538. Mental health and substance abuse are lifestyle and medical issues, not legal issues. The same can be said about a lawyer's physical and spiritual health. How a person handles stress, conflict, or disappointment and how a person interacts with others in the legal system are largely personal choices based upon many factors, including a person's religious beliefs, personality, character traits, morals, and personal goals and ambitions. Lifestyle modifications and medical treatment (however altruistic the motives) should not be the Tennessee Supreme Court's goal under Rule 21.

Requiring one hour of CLE on mental health or substance abuse most likely will not aid a lawyer who is struggling with mental health or substance abuse. For example, requiring three hours of ethics has not greatly impacted or deterred unethical attorney behavior. Those attorneys who engage in unethical practices will skirt the underlying goals by "watching" the online CLE webcasts without truly listening or learning from them. That is because a person's ethical behavior is an outward manifestation of a person's deeply rooted inward beliefs and morals. The same is true for a person who struggles with mental health or substance abuse problems. Participating in one hour of CLE will likely not benefit a lawyer with mental health or substance abuse problems unless the lawyer recognizes his or her problem. At that point, the lawyer is ready and willing to seek help and then – and only then – would participation in a CLE on mental health or substance abuse be of any help.

I have no opposition to voluntary CLE courses on mental health and substance abuse. The Tennessee Bar Association and various local bar associations already offer such courses. However, making these courses mandatory for all attorneys for the purpose of forcing some attorneys who struggle with these issues to attend is an overreach. The bottom line is that mandatory Continuing Legal Education should be just that – legal, not lifestyle or medical education. Straying from purely legal development courses is a slippery slope.

Sincerely,

Doug S. Hamill

Dear Mr. Hivner,

I'm writing in support of the petition to amend Rule 21 on Continuing Legal Education to require one hour of mental health/substance abuse programming every three years. This proposed amendment would not increase the current 15 hours/year requirement.

I am in support of this proposed amendment because I believe mental health is extremely important, especially for lawyers practicing in the current environment. This requirement, though minimal, could potentially save lives and, at the very least, would certainly raise awareness of this important issue.

I believe the proposed amendment is in the best interest of our legal profession. I urge its adoption.

RE: Public Comment to "In re: Petition to Amend Supreme Court Rule 21", No. ADM2025-01538

I am writing, on my own behalf, in regard to the proposed amendment to S. Ct. R 21 seeking to add a one-hour CLE requirement related to mental health/substance abuse.

I do not, necessarily, object to the amendment, because there can never be "too many" mental health resources or "too much" mental health information/education. However, I do believe this is a proper forum in which to express my ongoing concern that many well-meaning attempts to address the grave issue of poor mental health and substance abuse in the legal profession are largely ineffective because they do not address some of the more global causes of these issues.

Proposed remedies, such as this amendment, seek to put the onus on the individual — an individual who (we assume in some cases) is already struggling with more than they can effectively handle. There is certainly a benefit to providing more education and resources to attorneys to individually address these issues. However, I strongly feel they are insufficient to effect substantive change. Such measures can even potentially be regressive or harmful by permitting those who can affect meaningful change on a global level to believe they have done their due diligence and can lay responsibility for this issue aside. To put it summarily — This feels like putting a bandaid on a bullet wound. (Or maybe a more pointed metaphor might be — it's like asking a shooting victim to hold a cloth against their own open wound.)

It concerns me that the responsibility continues to be laid solely at the feet of the already-struggling individual, instead of using our resources to address the issues, unique to this profession, which cause and/or exacerbate that individual's mental illness in the first place. The ABA - citing to the same study cited in the proposed amendment (see #12) - enumerated recommended remedial actions the profession and institutions should take to address these concerns.

(<https://www.americanbar.org/news/abanews/publications/youraba/2017/december-2017/secrecy-and-fear-of-stigma-among-the-barriers-to-lawyer-well-being/>) Among that list were the recommendations to: "Identify stakeholders and the role each of them can play in reducing the level of toxicity in the legal profession;" and "Take small, incremental steps to change how law is practiced and how lawyers are regulated to instill greater well-being in the profession." I do not, at this time, have fully articulated solutions to address these global causes. However, I hope our profession will continue to have meaningful conversations about this issue and that our Supreme Court and other professional institutions will continue to push larger change to make our profession one which is not such a noxious incubator for these ills.

I'll end by saying I do, sincerely, appreciate the attention to and attempts to remedy these ills. To reiterate — I believe there can never be "too much" help/education/support/etc. regarding mental health / substance abuse. Therefore, I support this measure. But I do so alongside a strong plea to our Supreme Court and others to continue seeking other - potentially more effective - solutions, in addition to this proposed amendment.

Dear Madam or Sir,

I write in opposite to the Supreme Court's proposed amendment to Rule 21 requiring 1 hr every 3 yrs of CLE for mental health or substance use. I oppose this amendment for the following reasons –

1. Logistical difficulties in tracking and compliance,
2. Obstacles to finding compliant courses, and
3. Increased compliance burden for those who maintain a multi-state practice.

I support increased education and resources for mental health and substance abuse. However, I do not believe this is the best way to support that objective.

Re: Tennessee Supreme Court Rule 21
Docket No. ADM2025-01538

The Court will save lives by granting Petition No. ADM2025-01538.

I graduated from Vanderbilt Law School in 1981 and had a long, successful career. Nonetheless, afflicted with clinical depression, I attempted suicide in 2015. My goal in supporting the Petition is to prevent law students, attorneys and judges from going down such a self-destructive path.

Mental illness is a medical condition that has many warning signs and effective treatments. Helpful resources are readily available to those in the legal profession. However, as I experienced, most attorneys are unaware of such signs, treatments and resources. The Petition overcomes that shortcoming by amending Section 3.01(a) of Rule 21 to require at least one hour of continuing legal education credit for mental health or substance use disorders programming in a three-year period to be included in the yearly required three hours of ethics/professionalism credit. That CLE requirement will assure that the legal professionals in Tennessee are aware of the severe mental health challenges in the law and they will know that there are resources available to them or their colleagues in distress.

I have no doubt that mental health CLE programming will save lives based upon my own mental health journey and the overwhelming public response to my articles on this taboo topic. My article, "Mental Health in the Legal Profession: A Crisis, a Case Study and a Call to Action," was the cover story in the January/February 2021 issue of the Tennessee Bar Journal. On March 9, 2021, in its "Letters of the Law: Mental Health Article Resonates With Readers," the TBJ published over 40 letters responding to my article ("the most ever received about an article in the Tennessee Bar Journal"). Those letters were only the tip of the ice burg - the silent majority consisting of law students, attorneys, judges, law school professors and administrators, law firm employees/staff, journalists, psychiatrists and attorney spouses - those effected by the mental health problems in the legal profession. All of them appreciated the light being shown on this difficult topic. For example:

- Attorney: "... You'll likely never know, but lessons in what you have written and shared about things not easily shared will save lives."
- Judge: "... In my view an article like this truly has the power to change (and even save) lives."
- Law school professor: "... I have no doubt - none - that this will save some lives and it may help to make a dent on real plagues in our profession."
- Non-attorney: "...You may never know how many lives your effort will save, even if it doesn't get a wider audience. EVERY lawyer should read this!"

Every attorney will be exposed to such lifesaving information if the Court grants the Petition.

Thank you for your attention and consideration.

I would like to voice my opposition to the proposed amendment to Rule 21 that would require attorneys to receive one hour of continuing legal education in mental health or substance abuse disorders every three years.

First, it is enough that attorneys in Tennessee must complete 15 hours of continuing legal education every year. Adding an additional requirement that must be kept track of in three-year increments adds an unwanted burden that will doubtless serve as a pitfall for many who will simply forget this new and unusual requirement. The stress thereby added to our lives would surely offset whatever mental health benefits the Tennessee Lawyer Assistance Program seeks to promote by its endeavor here.

Furthermore, the purpose of continuing legal education is to keep oneself informed as to developments in the law or ethical strategies for practicing it. While maintaining one's mental health is important, it is not the place of the State to obligate anyone to be a captive and regular audience to opinions on it or advertisements for relevant services. It would be just as inappropriate for the State to obligate attorneys to attend a regular CLE on gym memberships, nutrition, or weight loss even though physical health is as important as mental health.

Finally, there exists no need for a new CLE requirement for Tennessee lawyers. The Tennessee Lawyer Assistance Program is already well known, and to the extent that it is not, the Tennessee Lawyer Assistance Program can find other ways to advertise itself than by burdening the entirety of the legal profession with another CLE to keep track of.

Thus, I would ask that the proposed amendment be rejected.

Sincerely,
Anthony Berry

Mr. Hivner,

I am writing in response to the courts request for public comment on the above referenced proposed rule change. I support amending Rule 21, Section 3.01(a) to require at least one hour of the currently required three hours in ethics/professionalism programming be dedicated to mental health or substance use disorders every three years. I think anything we can do to reduce the stigma in the legal community surrounding acknowledging and seeking help for mental health issues and/or substance use disorders is potentially of great benefit to lawyers, the courts, and the public. I'm confident that a substantial percentage of lawyer misconduct (reported and not reported) stems from attorneys failing to address these issues before substantial harm has occurred.

Thanks for your consideration.

Docket number ADM2025-01538

I'm writing in support of the proposed change in your CLE rules to require one hour of mental health/substance abuse training every three years. North Carolina adopted a similar mandatory rule in 2001 (1 hr/3 yrs). There was a dramatic rise in the number of both self-referrals and referrals of colleagues to NC LAP. As a general rule, the number of client files often tracks the number of CLE given in a year. We know that CLE is the most important outreach tool we have in North Carolina. We often say that we "bat 1000 at CLE" because we receive either a self-referral or colleague referral from every CLE talk that we give.

Back in 2017, I charted some graphs. They are attached. Slide one details North Carolina's active caseload and CLE presentations from 2011-2017. The Minnesota Program responded to requests for information, so their data is also reflected on the second slide. It documents a similar tracking: more CLE = more active LAP client files. The third slide shows the dramatic rise in the volume of active files after the enactment of a mandatory CLE rule in North Carolina.

North Carolina recently went through an overhaul of its CLE rules. The mental health/substance abuse rule was renamed the Professional Well-Being hour. Substantively the rule was expanded a bit to include broad topics like compassion fatigue, stress management, and resilience topics. As a provider of these CLE talks, we offer a menu of options which can be seen here: <https://www.nclap.org/continuing-legal-education/>. We strive to add a new program every couple of years and rotate out old programs. CLE event sponsors are not required to use NCLAP for the Professional Well-Being hour, but most do.

Dear Clerk,

I would also suggest a CLE on Social Media which is creating huge problems when decisions and actions are taken based on misinterpretation. Most attorneys are never there (and I understand that!) and don't understand the problems they create that have life altering consequences when legal decisions are made and actions taken without giving the "target" of the action an opportunity to provide context for a posting.

Respectfully,

Good afternoon,

In response to No. ADM2025-01538, please, do not require one hour of mental health CLE.

That is simply another matter that attorneys must track, counterintuitively adding to their strain.

There is nothing wrong with current CLE courses including discussion of mental health, but that discussion does not need to be mandatory.

Additionally, mental health is already a well-known phrase and seemingly all members of the public are aware of it and of ways to seek assistance if desired.

Dear Court Clerk,

I am a retired attorney but have been living mental health hell with my grown daughter whose problem created a plethora of criminal, civil, and custody problems which have cost me the price of a house and continue to be resolved.

The mental health issue must be addressed. Not just for attorneys but also for their clients be they defendants or plaintiffs. There is a huge gap between the law and mental health. Mental health, as you surely are aware, is now a huge problem in our world and much injustice happens because of that gap.

I suggest that one hour CLE a year is inadequate to assure that clients are considered in order to avoid the travesties of justice that I have experienced and that are happening at all socio economic levels. A person without resources is essentially kicked to the curb without an understanding of mental health problems by the bar.

The injustices include the juvenile court system which needs it as much as anyone. My experience has been that, if a drug problem, there is a path the court follows. If a mental health problem, it boils down to whether the judge and guardian ad litem have any understanding whatsoever of the dynamics. Add a contention-loving lawyer to the mix, who is more about control, winning, and earning fees and only the child gets hurt. I have seen too many instances wherein the attorney for the plaintiffs who got a Dependency and Neglect granted, was so stuck on showing off that the child's best interest was hurt and the mother's mental health continued to decline by being kept from her child.

All this being said, I know my comments may not be considered. After experiencing the legal system from the outside, I am glad that I chose to leave the legal profession. I lived 72 years with only going to court with a divorce. I lived the last 2 with nothing but civil, criminal, and custody lawyers, some of whom have made everything worse.

Please do not post my name anywhere with this comment. It would only exacerbate the difficulty of getting justice.

Comment on Proposed Amendment to Rule 21 (ADM2025-01538)

Respectfully, the proposed amendment—though unimpeachable in intent—moves us further down a slippery slope within an already dense and expanding compliance regime. Once we carve out a mandatory hour for mental-health or substance-abuse content, why not also require stand-alone hours for technology competence, cybersecurity, financial literacy, civility, diversity and inclusion, physical wellness, domestic abuse, artificial-intelligence risk, speeding (and other traffic violations that cause injuries and fatalities on Tennessee highways), honesty, attorney advertising, and so on? Each is important. But compelled slices of curriculum for all of them would crowd out an attorney's professional judgment as to which CLE programs best serve their practice and would further—and unnecessarily—complicate Tennessee's CLE framework, especially for small firms and lawyers admitted in multiple jurisdictions.

Tennessee lawyers already have abundant access to ethics and professionalism CLE—including mental-health and substance-use programming—through the TBA and many other providers. The current framework empowers attorneys to select the ethics content most responsive to their practices and clients. Before adding a new mandate, the Court should ask: Is there credible evidence that compulsory attendance in these topics reduces impairment or improves outcomes? If the answer is uncertain, the wiser course is to preserve flexibility.

Tennessee attorneys' CLE resources are best devoted to programming that fits their individual needs, practices, and clients—not to navigating ever-more granular compliance dictates. Encourage these courses, spotlight them, even incentivize them; but do not make them compulsory.
